

What's New About What's Old?

Guidelines for Texas History News Items

Part of the mission of the Alliance for Texas History is to help ensure that news and current events impacting the study and communication of Texas history are communicated to our members and to the public.

With that goal in mind, the Alliance for Texas History will curate and share links to stories from the original sources in newspapers, magazines, journals, and other publications, both print and digital. Within the notes about the item, we will include the title or headline, the source, the date, and a short summary. The most recent additions will be at the top of the page.

Regarding content, our mainline thrust will always be to focus on Texas history and Texas historians in the news. This will include Texas-oriented announcements, awards, notices of coming events, personal achievements of members, and exhibits. We will also highlight public policy or editorials that are of interest to historians. Historical articles and essays are not our focus for this news page.

Links to articles are posted at the discretion of the Alliance for Texas History. Members and others may submit suggestions for items to include to contact@atxh.org. Not all submissions will be posted even if they meet the stated criteria.